Christmas Past

Soon it will be time for Alan to dress the Tudor and Victorian Rooms ready for our popular Tudor and Victorian Christmases. The leafy decoration and roaring log fires provide the perfect environment in which to learn about traditions from the past.

Spring 2026

Looking forward to the Spring Term, we now have a full complement of schools booked to come and enjoy our activities. We have been busy booking programmes, making sure Maiden Castle is ready for many invasions of Romans and the river is clear of farm animals for our local river studies!

A Day in the Life

OF A SAXON

“ Simon says our new fence must be strong enough to keep the pigs out of the cabbages. So today he let me help build it! He called it wattle and daub. I thought that sounded funny, like the name of a pair of goats.

First, we had to make the wattle fence using long sticks cut from the hazel trees around Hooke. My hands still sting from where the bark rubbed them. Big posts were stuck in the ground all in a row, and I helped weave the thinner sticks in and out between them. It was like making a giant basket, only standing up!

“

We then stood back and looked at what we'd made. It was a bit lumpy, but Simon said it would dry hard and keep the wind out. I think it's the best fence in the whole village. Tomorrow, maybe we'll make another bit and I'll try not to get mud in my hair this time.

Then came the messy part: the daub. We mixed it in buckets. It was mud and straw, and we added dung from the horses too. I didn't know that fences could be made of poo! It smelled terrible, but Simon said it keeps the walls strong when it dries. I helped slap handfuls of the mush between the sticks. It squished between my fingers - cold and gloopy and I laughed when some splashed on my tunic.
